

There is no far side.

The cube glows silver-white, and the family crosses to the roof of the world — the high Andes, where the oldest civilization in the Americas joins canyon to canyon with nothing but woven rope, and mountain to farmland with stone terraces climbing into thin bright air.

Simeon learns the seventh wisdom — build the bridge before you need to cross — and a deeper truth waits inside the mountain: the carrier and the door are one; there is no far side. The spiral has turned inward, and the family begins to suspect what they are becoming.

The seventh adventure in The Cube Chronicles.

The Cube Chronicles • Book 7 • Ages 10–16

THE CUBE CHRONICLES • BOOK 7 The Rope, The Ridge, and The Roof of the World JEREMY TINDER

The Rope, The Ridge, and The Roof of the World

A Time-Travel Adventure in the Ancient Andes

JEREMY TINDER